THE DEMAND FOR FOOD

"So I say again, let us not dream of talking at the present time of over-production of food, and that the farmers of the world have come to the limit of what they can be called upon to supply. The demand for food, if people can be enabled to get the kind of food that they would like to eat, has practically only been scratched; it is almost infinite from our present point of view. Therefore, I may be bold and prophesy—not with the slightest hope of seeing the prophecy realized this year, next year, or so on, but I am quite certain it will be ultimately realized—that the cure for agricultural depression is not restriction of production, but the starting up in the world at large of the wheels of trade and exchange."—Sir A. Daniel Hall at the World's Grain Conference.

Speed Essential If Session To Prorogue—Is Past The Ninth Week

Members of the legislature today commence what is expected to be the last week of the session, a session which is already in its ninth week. But if prorogation is to take place even by next Saturday much speed will have to be made. Some observers feel that the members will be attending to unfinished business as late as next week. However, general opinion is that the session will wind up by the end of this week.

A highlight of the week will be the reappearance before the house sitting in committee of the whole, of Major C. H. Douglas, originator and chief exponent of the "Douglas Scheme" of social credit. He appeared before the committee on Friday and kept an engagement at Calgary over the week end.

Outside of this, the major portion of the week will be devoted to discussion of resolutions and consideration of resolutions. In the last few days the order paper has been somewhat "cleared of resolutions although there are several yet to be dealt with.

A considerable grist of legislation awaits disposition, with some of the most important bills yet to be disposed of.

A great deal of discussion is bound to take place on some of the bills and from all indications the members will have a very busy week if they are to wind up by Saturday.

Committee work is practically finished, which might clear the decks for one or two morning sittings.

What Weeds Cost Farmers In The West

I wonder if any of our readers have ever tried to dry a crop of grain which was loaded with coarse, heavy weeds in a wet fall such as 1926 or 1927. Have they also counted the cost in terms of lower grades, difficulty of threshing, grain going over in the straw pile, and in danger of heating in the bin due to small weeds? It would be interesting to know what it cost us for the privilege of growing ragweed, and just how much grain is rendered unfit for milling because it contains seed of this weed or other weeds which cannot be removed by ordinary methods, but which render the grain useless for the manufacture of flour. Milling companies have hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in cleaning machinery, just to remove small weeds, wild oats and mustard. Terminal elevators have approximately $5,000,000 invested in cleaning equipment and large sums have been spent in placing cleaning machinery in country elevators in Western Canada.

Freight on 11,000,000 Bushels of Screenings—

This figure is arrived at by multiplying the number of bus of grain delivered by the average percentage of dockage for each of the grains reported by the Canadian Bureau of Statistics. The average freight rate for wheat from Western Canadian points can be considered to be 13 cents a bushel. The problem is straight calculation

Bank Profit Sharing Advocated by Douglas At Commons Hearing

OTTAWA, April, 17—A plan to share bank profits with depositors and borrowers were described to the house banking committee on Tuesday by major C. H. Douglas, English author of the Douglas plan of social credit. For two hrs like a professor conducting a class in higher economics, he appeared as a witness before the committee reviewing bank legislation.

Swiftly Major Douglas sketched a plan, similar to the one he had laid before the New Zealand government and which he filed in detail with the committee. Its provisions were drastic. Bank dividends would be limited to 6% per annum, the rate usually prescribed for central banks but much lower than the rate for commercial institutions.

Suspense Accounts
Creation of two suspense accounts from profits over and above the 6% dividend was another step in the plan. Finally the plan provided that a proportion of credit in suspense accounts should be used for reduction of customers' overdrafts, and decreasing or reimbursing interest paid on customers' overdrafts.

The plan also envisioned application of the same principle to insurance companies. In the case of insurance companies a proportion of profits would be utilized in the purchase of preference or debenture stocks to be allotted pro rata to applicants.

It was a fact said the quiet-spoken engineer economist that 75 or 80 per cent of the assets of the world were in the control, direct or indirect of banks and insurance companies.

In a committee room packed with spectators, Major Douglas leveled an eight point indictment against the existing financial system. Then he outlined broadly his alternative, the basis of which was utilization of the productive wealth of the productive wealth of the country for monetization purposes.

Productive Wealth
Banks, exclaimed the much-traveled Cambridge graduate, created credit out of nothing. The witness hastened to explain that people thought it all right if banks issued credit but all wrong if any one else did the issuing. In his scheme, he would take monetization privileges away from the banks and base it on the productive wealth of the country, "making everyone richer and no one poorer."
